Berlin, Germany

Let's break the walls wherever we are!

Two groups of young Israeli and Palestinian youngsters have been recently awarded the Carl Von Ossietzky Medal in Berlin. The International League for Human Rights gives this yearly award in order to highlight the work a person or a group has done to draw attention to a social subject or issue related to violations of human rights. This year, the award was given to two groups of Middle East youngsters who have been gathering every Friday for over 4 years, to march protesting against the wall built in the Gaza Strip, in the town of Bilain.

A group of young women of the town of Bilain has found a way to survive and take care of their children, creating a cooperative where they work with Palestinian traditional crafts.

Five years ago, when the wall began to be built and divided the town in two, these women and their grown up children, began a protest. Since then, Bilain has turned into an emblematic place against the wall building – a wall that is 600 km long and divides 183 towns.

Along this concrete and barbed wired border, youngsters from the Palestinian People's Council as well as young people from Israel who started coming regularly from different parts of the country, gather every Friday. They get organized and bring banners with slogans, sing anthems, tie themselves with chains to logs and many other creative and collective ways of protest and demonstration. They even organized an international congress in Bilain, last year.

Each Friday, they face the Israeli army, against whom they take a communicative and non-violent attitude, in spite of being attacked over and over again with rubber bullets.

A young Israeli girl describes the confusion of these soldiers: "When the Israeli soldiers wanted to take us prisoner, they didn't have any justification, they didn't have the imagined enemy, the usual stigma, because we weren't terrorists or communists or religious fanatics or violent people. Being so confused, they needed to define us as a group and look down on us. So they called us "anarchists". We adopted this name as our identity and since then we've called ourselves "The Wall Anarchists".

When they went up on stage to get their awards, these youngsters said that "usually, no one writes about non-violence because it clashes against the tabloid press, since there are no dead bodies or weapons".

Then, thanking for the award, they said "we need the international community so we can be heard, so this non-violent resistance influences public opinion".

Protest voices against violence in Gaza travel around the world

On Saturday 3rd, exactly when Ehud Barak gave the order to begin the bloody offensive attack against Gaza, around 10,000 Arab and Jewish citizens were demonstrating in Tel Aviv, while 150,000 people did the same through Israel. "As a human being, as an Israeli, as a defender of peace, I feel proud of being here today", said the speech that Uri Avnery could not give to the demonstrators, because of the siege and the threats of the fundamentalists. That's how a wave of demonstrations and press releases began. A wave that would repeat itself during the weeks of January, throughout the world. Protests in front of the USA and Israel embassies continued one after the other, demanding that someone put an end to the massacre. There were spontaneous demonstrations, while others were organized in Europe and America. The activists, wearing Palestinian headscarves, raised the half moon flags of the country, while taking off their shoes and throwing them, which has become a symbol of resistance since the Iraqi journalist threw one at Bush. The next two weekends there were simultaneous large protests again all over the world, but specially in the cities and capitals of the Arabic world. One of the biggest was in Alexandria, with 50,000 people condemning the complicity of Arab governments with the blockade.

Display of statements supporting the cease-fire

World Without Wars supports the Israeli and Palestinian youngsters in their protest through a statement. The founder of the organization and coordinator of the World March for Peace and Non-violence, Rafael de la Rubia, explained: "The missile attacks of the armed group Hamas on Israel are no justification for the armed offensive of the Israeli army in Gaza just as the economic sanctions against Palestine do not justify the suicide attacks, the missile attacks of Hamas or any attack by any other Palestinian armed group."

All humanist spokesmen declared their rejection of the events in Gaza, highlighting the pacifist work of the organized groups from both peoples. "We condemn the violence of Israel and we condemn the violence used by the Palestinian armed groups. Only a non-violent consciousness will be able to stop the violence and if such consciousness today is small, we'll have to make it grow", said Tomás Hirsch's open letter. He is a former presidential candidate and current Latin-American spokesperson for humanism.

"The World March is a proposal open to the expression of all people, all religions, all cultures, that favors reconciliation towards the future. We join together for a non-violent future that's already emerging from the depths of the human being", explained Javiera Oñate, spokesperson for World Without Wars, Chile.

Open letter from Federico Mayor Zaragoza asking for active participation in the World March

Dear Friends:

I wish to inform you of my decision to join and to actively participate in the World March for Peace and Nonviolence, which is an initiative of the World Without Wars Association.

This is the way Federico Mayor Zaragoza, president of the UNESCO for 12 years and founder of the association Culture of Peace, opens his letter addressed to his friends of other organizations. This defender of social justice, who plans to recreate the UNO, did not hesitate to be one of the first personalities to give his decided and enthusiastic support to the World March.

Several reasons have prompted me to join this initiative: - I am sure that this is the right moment in history to promote a vast popular mobilization in favour of a worldwide radical change (financial, social, environmental, nutritional and ethical...) to achieve the transition from a culture of imposition, violence and war to a culture of dialogue, conciliation and peace, from force to the word; from a war economy to an economy of global development, including the eradication of poverty and alienation.

A march with these characteristics would contribute to rapidly creating a consciousness of peace in and among peoples, who must cease to be passive spectators and become the tireless protagonists of solidarity. It is time to awaken the Rosa Parks that we all have deep down inside.

- I believe that the time has come to participate in an action that will unite all men and women who have dedicated their lives to building a culture of peace, whatever their role may have been, and to enable them to span the globe, raising their voices and proclaiming justice, freedom and the equal dignity of all human beings, so that they may be heard by all, and particularly by world leaders, parliamentarians, those in power... who being aware of what is at risk, may likewise be prompted to participate in the transformation that we advocate.

From the onset and in each place, it is essential to be able to count on the participation of singers, orchestras, performers, athletes, actors... who due to their popularity have the power to mobilize people.

- Today, modern communications technology enables us for the first time to use distance participation techniques (SMS, Internet). Let's put them to use. Let us forever remember the words of Burke: "Nobody makes a greater mistake than those who do nothing because they think they could only do a little!" No one can harvest the fruits of seeds that they didn't have the courage to plant. Let us invent the future and prompt a rapid evolution. Between evolution and revolution there is only the "r" of responsibility.

- Paraphrasing Federico García Lorca, this march will undoubtedly prompt a "spiritual explosion" that will contribute to achieving the possible world we all dream.

These are some of my reasons. I ask for your collaboration".

Santiago, Chile

The three Spaniards spreading the World March by bike will be received by fans on their way through Santiago.

Bicicultura, an association from Chile that has just endorsed the March, will summon other bikers associations to go and receive, on their way through Santiago, the Spanish bikers that are travelling all over the world promoting the World March for Peace and Non-Violence.

Luis Marquina and Emilia Curiel, a Burgalese couple keen on cycling, left Madrid for Buenos Aires on January 4th. to embark on travelling the 8.000 kilometers by bike so as to make this worldwide project known. In Argentina they met Javier Sáiz, who joined them during two of the six months of travelling.

The Chilean south-to-north route they are travelling right now is often quite tough, but they are very satisfied by the positive way the idea is being received, according to their own declarations. They take pictures of the people they get to endorse the March holding the banner they are carrying. They interview mayors and institutions, and the local media is doing a good coverage of them (see links).

They have a blog (<http://patagoniaenbici.blogspot.com>) where you can see the trip and impressions they are sending.

The President Michelle Bachelet showed her enthusiasm about the project and offered to record a video message with her endorsement in order to call on others to join the World March, during a meeting held on 29th

January with Tomás Hirsch, humanist spokesperson for Latin America and her competitor in the last presidential elections.

In the video message which was recorded the following day, she confirmed that she will receive the Core Team of the March on its arrival in Santiago de Chile. Bachelet committed to support different initiatives related with the WM and hence, in the month of March, she will receive Rafael de la Rubia, World Coordinator of the WM. "Her endorsement will contribute so that other presidents of the region, which we are going to meet during the next months, will also join the World March, declared Tomás Hirsch to Pressenza IPA.

Soccer is with the March: Inter-Milan endorses the March

On Jan 30th, the current Italian champions "Football Club Internazionale Milano" joined the World March. A public press release will be made known during one of the usual Sunday press conferences. Mourinho, the manager will invite one of the players to explain why they are joining the WM. Then the European Humanist Spokesperson, Giorgio Schultze, will present and explain the meaning of this world project to the media. The soccer Club will also contribute to the dissemination of the March contributing ideas and the necessary means to carry them out. Together they studied the proposal of recording a video with the "stars" dressed in a T-shirt of the March, the projection of videos on the big screens during the soccer games and other possibilities to involve the young new generations of sportsmen/women and those who want to create a consciousness for non-violence.

Morocco

Morocco has formed its Promotion Team

After considerable dissemination work carried out during the last months, different Moroccan associations have constituted the Promotion Team of the March in Morocco. The contact, directed to society and local personalities, produced a multiplicative effect whose result is the endorsement of personalities as important as the great Moroccan poet Driss Allouch (<http://allouch.jeeran.com>) as well as 120 associations throughout the whole country. In December, the Humanist Forum of Tangier took place which facilitated the meeting of participants of the team.

Thanks to this work and the participation of associations, now there are local Promotion Teams in the cities of Oujda, Cup and Fez, and in others like Tangier, Rabat and Agadir where they are being formed. Moreover the brochure exists now in Arabic.

In the cities of Fez, Cup and Taourirt the project was presented with an attendance of 70 associations and organizations, like the Church of Taza, as well as personalities like the founder of the 1200 anniversary of the city of Fez. Meanwhile, in Tantan, Gulimine and the whole region of Sahara more than 100 associations and heads of tribes were contacted.

The organization of a regional gathering of associations for communication and agreement in Oujda and its region allowed the participation of around 100 important personalities as well as the presence of the press, radio and television. Both the press and the second public channel of Moroccan television 2M disseminated the activity (see links).

The Bolivian people renounce war

With the backing of 60% of the electorate, polls are showing a victory for the "YES" camp in the referendum that took place on the 25th of January to approve a new constitution in which Bolivia renounces war as a means to resolve conflicts.

The National Electoral Court confirmed an unprecedented participation in the voting, 85% of the more than 3.8 million voters, but it will take a few days to produce the official results.

350 International observers monitored the process on a day without incidents, while the opposition was inviting people to disregard the results in the four regions in which the "NO" triumphed.

Days before, "World without Wars", through its president Rafael de la Rubia, released a communiqué supporting the YES and applauding Evo Morales's vision of the future, with this new Constitution

Congo in Motion

During the month of January the preparation of the March has taken a qualitative leap in the DR Congo. In the meeting of the Promotion Team (PT) a national coordinator was chosen who will participate in the International Promotion Team meetings and also some important functions such as International Relations and Education. The teams in the provinces of Katanga and Kinshasa are already in full swing and with nominated coordinators with great activity in South Kivo.

The country will participate in the March through a convergent route that has yet to be defined. The connection that the March delineates between the different provinces is important. The PT is in contact with the coordinator of the East and South African route, initially designed to cover Ethiopia, Kenya, Tanzania, Zambia, Mozambique, Swaziland and South Africa. In the last weeks two interviews have taken place with the secretariat of the Archbishop of Lubumbashi (Katanga) and in the first two weeks of the month with the diplomatic council of the President of the Provincial Assembly in the same province.

In the national and provincial calendars in different places we are working on the calendar with some presentations planned, like the activities for the 22nd of February, the Scouting Day, which is very well supported in the country.

The Rally Paris-Dakar spreads peace

Two drivers carried to the starting point of the Paris-Dakar Rally a banner with them that demanded "Peace in the Middle East" and that invited people to support the World March. The current phase of the rally has changed continents, trying to avoid the violence suffered in Africa last year and is now taking place in Argentina march from the Ministry of Culture to El Ejido Park, where a human nonviolence symbol was formed. The activities, that have young people as the protagonists, will continue with a plan of training and multiplication of "active nonviolence nurseries", besides the development of multiple initiatives to create consciousness in favour of nuclear disarmament, the end of wars and the elimination of all forms of violence. Two days afterwards, on the 21st, the first meeting of the Ecuador Promotion Team was held with the participation of 35 people, representing 26 organisations.

Also on the same day, the Latin American Association of Radio Education, broadcast an interview with Rafael de la Rubia. The World Coordinator of the March explained that "In 2008 approximately USD900,000 million was spend on weapons. Peace is not possible in the world with this massive purchase of tanks and bullets in case of 'possible' wars", And he added "Neither is peace possible with poverty, hunger, lack of access to education and health care, among others things".

A thousand poems for Peace

The World March was the muse behind the event "A thousand poems for Peace", put on by the group "Poets for Peace" in Santiago library, in which 70 people participated. It was a very emotional event with music and videos, in which various poets read their poems, a troubadour performed a poetic-theatre piece based on "Dialogues of the Isla Negra", by Silo. As a surprise finale, a non-violence action was made to support the cease-fire in Gaza, launching into the sky cardboard plates on which poems were written and good wishes for the people of Palestine and Israel.

and Chile. Some organizations used the start of the race in Buenos Aires to protest against the war in Gaza and to spread the word about the World March. More than half a million people gathered at this event with a lot of communication media. The activists distributed flyers to the audience and the participants of the rally. It was also possible to talk to some drivers and to the press about the necessity for awareness of peace and about the methodology of non-violence to solve all kinds of Conflicts.

• The Greenhouse of Lavapiés (Spain)

This is a group of supermen in green overalls, called gardeners.

They have supernatural powers which most of the mortals do not use: critical, creative and active minds. They are dangerous and they have weapons of mass destruction to further reflection, dialogue and communication between persons. They produce creative seeds and plant them. Each gardener attends to their seed, proposes an idea or a project and among all gardeners develop the seeds of each and plant them. "The World March for Peace and Nonviolence is a unique opportunity to set in motion the power of the people. We know that as individuals we don't have any power of influence, none at all, and we also know that if very many get together in one direction then they can have a very big power. Why not unite then? There are many substantial reasons that stop it, to state some of them: individualism and differentiation in the society of consumers, the bubble of the world where we all live, the rule of live and let die... The World March is an initiative which could remove all that which prevents our union, and just because of that it already has a decisive importance".

January 3rd, 2009

5th meeting of the International Promotion Team

The chat was attended by 55 people representing 39 countries and 14 functions.

The March by countries

There are activities in 81 countries, of which 67 already have people in charge of the Promotion Team (PT).

Promotion Teams have different levels of development, in some countries there already exists local coordination. Thanks to the effort to connect with other organizations, their presence grows in the PTs and this also leads to a bigger number of endorsements.

In several countries activities were carried out on December 10, Human Rights Day, and December 31, popular race of San Silvestre.

In relation to the official launch in Chile, the attendance of famous sportsmen at the annual gala produced a great popular impact, apart from the presentation in front of 12.000 people there was a match in which the 22 of the most famous footballers of the country were playing.

Although the decision is for each PT, it is suggested that the official launches take place in the first three months of the year, six months before the beginning of the WM.

Routes and the core team

The last version of the map of routes which is now circulating will be updated in one or two months. The Core Team will be divided into two when it enters South America, a Pacific branch and an Atlantic branch. The proposals for modification of the central route must be sent previously to the list for their viability to be studied, since it is established in the general calendar. There is no deadline for changes or inclusion of convergent routes. That will vary until the last minute, but it is necessary to coordinate them with those responsible for each stretch.

Around 60 people are included in the Pre-core team, coordinated and kept in touch through a mailing list and receiving more details about the way the team will operate. However, the members of the Team will be made known when they are definite. More nationalities are still needed, since there are only 20 countries represented so far.

Dissemination of the March

It is necessary that the PT impels in their countries the formation of press teams to collaborate and reinforce the work of the News Agency.

People that participate require a specialization from the point of view of what is newsworthy a skill which could be acquired with specific workshops on writing, photography and video.

The written bulletins are a selection of the information that arrives via the webs and through the email lists and it can be amplified by following hyperlinks, in this way we can limit the number of pages. It is convenient to send the bulletins in all the languages with the link to get it from the web, rather than as an attachment.

TV dissemination is a priority, for which we are encouraging the formation and qualification of video teams in all the places to be able to film all the activities in high quality.

Video-bulletin:

<http://videoforum.theworldmarch.org/index.php?action=videos;cat=7>

Institutional Relations

An international team has been formed with a coordinator and people with experience in each continent to establish relationships, to determine the truly international "personalities" and to organise existing endorsements. Another team has also been created to contact those responsible for international organizations or big organizations to look for points of convergence in concrete and combined actions in the framework of the WM.

Webs and blogs

Approximately 50 webs and blogs of the WM are running. The main web receives 700 hits per day, with a daily top limit of 1,000.

A function will be created to take detailed statistics. Also, the access to the endorsements of personalities is being reorganized with a new outline, by theme and country and with the possibility of being downloaded as a listing. Please send the links of the videos produced in each country to enlarge in the web those already there only in Spanish. Soon, a massive delivery of the bulletin will take place to all those registered in the web. Apart from the six languages on the central web, a button has been enabled that connects with the additional web site www.worldmarchforpeace.org where more languages are available. The technical teams of all the countries need more people to collaborate.

Translations

Three people coordinate the translation teams into 15 languages. The inclusion of new languages is being prepared. A database of translators will allow a systematization of this work that, because of its volume, needs great organization.

It is recommended that, when editing and deciding the texts to be uploaded onto the web, one has co-present the work of the translators.

General calendar

For events, we can take advantage of the days already highlighted, such as March 8 (women's day) or March 17 (anniversary of the war of Iraq)

The next virtual meeting will take place on February 1st 2009 at the same time.

Music

This month, the WM Creative website received two songs from songwriters in favour of Peace and Nonviolence who are no longer in our midst: Xavier Jiménez and Johnny All, from Barcelona and Lima, respectively. It is moving to hear them sing their thoughtful lyrics ushering in a better world because they do so from another time and place. Memory and the future fuse in the march.
